

I think the best way to improve wireless service to rural areas is for the government to regulate such services as little as possible. Reduce the regulatory burden and cost of supplying service by decreasing the number of forms and the length of those forms that providers must file. Seek to ensure that state and local agencies do not interfere with the ability of wireless carriers to set up service, including building service towers.